

Agricultural.

We call the careful and stationary of our readers to the following report of the American Agricultural Society at Philadelphia last month.

It is probably the most reliable report that has been published in this State in regard to fruits suited for cultivation in Kentucky.

For persons who are not familiar with our own market, can realize the importance, in a peculiar point of view, of the fruit crop
of Kentucky, in the matter of the first importance, therefore, that should be accorded
upon this matter:

REPORT OF THE KENTUCKY HORTI-CULTURAL SOCIETY.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Sept. 18, 1860.

The Kentucky Horticultural Society, at Lexington, in the American Agricultural Society would respectfully submit the following report:

APPLES.

Question: Is there 100 trees for family use, what size, and what what variety of apples, and how many trees
are required for market purposes?

Answer: For 100 trees the best six varieties are:

Early Harvest,
and Madeline's Blush;

Red Delicious, Syn. Carthamus and Golden Sweet;

Red Winesap, and
Roxbury Russet;
